Amongst the trials of that year, several of which, as we have heard him state them, would compare with the experiences of our venerable fathers in the primitive days of Methodism, we select the following, which is romantic in its features, and threatened a tragic consummation. Its moral purpose is to illustrate, convincingly, the care of Providence over blind, helpless and distressed mortals. The field of this young mans labors bordered on Lake St. Clair. His rides extended northward, also, on the American shore of the strait which connects that smaller body of water with Lake Huron. Some time during the year he had occasion to sail down the former lake, along its western shore. As he was going aboard the schooner in which he had taken passage, some of his acquaintances asked permission to place under his protection three ladies who were bound for the same point. They set sail. Toward evening the captain of the vessel resolved to lie to during the night. He chose to anchor off the mouth of Clinton River, about a mile distant from the shore. The passengers, of whom there were several, noticed a dark cloud resting on the horizon; and, from all observable portents, they were led to expect a severe thunder-gust. Deeming the position of the vessel unfavorable to endure a heavy blow, they became solicitous to get on shore. A short distance above the mouth of the river, on...
