Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from Speech of Mr. Corwin, of Ohio, on the Mexican War: Delivered in the Senate of the United States, February 11, 1847 He admonishes all not to anticipate evil to come, but to fold their hands and close their eyes in quietude, ever mindful of the consolatory text, sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof. But the Senator from South Carolina, (Mr. Calhoun,) summoning from the depths of his thoughtful and powerful mind all its energies, and looking abroad on the present condition of the Republic, is pained with fearful apprehension, doubt, distrust, and dismay. To his vision, made strong by a long life of careful observation, made keen by a comprehensive view of past history, the sky seems overcast with impending storms, and the dark future is shrouded in impenetrable gloom. When two such minds thus differ, those less familiar with great subjects affecting the happiness of nations may well pause, before they rush to a conclusion on this, a subject which, in all its bearings, immediate and remote, affects certainly the present prosperity, and probably the liberty, of two Republics, embracing together nearly thirty millions of people. Mr. President, it is a fearful responsibility we have assumed engaged in flagrant, desolating war with a neighboring Republic, to us, thirty millions of God's creatures look up for that moderated wisdom which, if possible, may stay the march of misery and restore to them, if it may be so, mutual feeling of good will, with all the best blessings of peace. I sincerely wish it were in my power to cherish those placid convictions of security which have settled upon the mind of...
