The fact, observed in nearly all his experiments, that a momentary contraction of the capillaries of a irog occurred whouever the animal made any violent movements, speaks strongly against any absolute paralysis of the vessels. The author explains the phenomenon by admitting two kinds of muscular fibres in the coats of the capillaries, one set contracting and the other dilating the vessels, and explaining the dilatation produced by nitrite of amyl as an irritation of these latter, the others remaining unaffected, and reacting, to a greater or less extent, under excitation. The probable primary cause of irritation by nitrite of amyl is the non-oxydation of the blood under its influence. The acceleration of the heart's action and lowering of bloodpressure which follow its use are due to the dilatation of the capillaries; but when the acceleration becomes very considerable; as after injection of the nitrite into a vein, it is possible that the nervous ganglia which give the heart its automatic movements may also play some part in producing the effect. The method by which the substance is introduced into the system is of much importance in producing its peculiar effects.
